

Nisos Announces Comprehensive Managed Intelligence Suite

Managed Intelligence™ company invests in elite cyber talent and technology to provide holistic risk reduction solution

April 4, 2023 - ALEXANDRIA, VA – Nisos, the Managed Intelligence Company™, today announced the company's new Managed Intelligence Suite, a new service that provides users with an initial risk assessment, ongoing monitoring and deep threat investigation to enhance threat response and prevention. The comprehensive offering builds on the momentum Nisos achieved in 2022 in response to growing industry demands for a holistic risk reduction service, and as a result of the company's investments in intelligence technology and top-caliber cyber talent.

“The increasing market demand for Managed Intelligence™ is driven by companies putting a greater emphasis on intelligence to inform their business and security operations, but many are still struggling with operationalizing these insights,” states David Etue, CEO at Nisos. “The Nisos Managed Intelligence Suite extends our ability to help more cybersecurity, corporate security and trust and safety teams by providing a complete, fiscally responsible solution that delivers timely, relevant, and immediately useful intelligence that cuts through the noise so clients can focus on the most material physical and digital threats.”

“We scaled our teams and technology to support this growing demand to deliver a solution that eases the intelligence burden for organizations around the world– from doubling our analysis and operations teams and obtaining hard-to-hire experts with federal agency and Fortune 500 experience to investing in our intelligence platform,” adds Etue.

The company's intelligence platform empowers Nisos analysts and provides scalable intelligence compiled from dozens of proprietary and commercially available tools and data feeds to support broad use-cases ranging from data leaks and exposure, M&A risk diligence, insider threats, executive protection and more. In addition, Nisos' skilled team of expert data collectors, analysts, linguists, dark web navigators and client success directors serve as an extension of client teams, empowering companies to reduce their risks and the impact of threats. The Managed Intelligence Suite is designed to effectively address an organization's intelligence needs from a people, process and technology perspective.

“We trust Nisos and the Managed Intelligence Suite to provide contextualized and impactful threat intelligence monitoring and investigations,” comments Matthieu Chan Tsin, Director of Threat Intelligence at Cowbell Cyber, regarding the immediate, tangible impact of the new Nisos service on their cybersecurity threat intelligence program. “The team's reports, which are composed to answer our questions, include actionable findings and recommendations that allow us to identify and mitigate threats before they impact our business.”

Nisos’ comprehensive intelligence suite is the result of the company’s ability to scale with organizations’ growing intelligence needs - following its own steady growth from 60 new hires in 2022 to doubling monthly revenue over the past 24 months. This growth has accelerated Nisos’ ability to provide high customer satisfaction, leading to 100 percent net revenue retention and subscription revenue increasing four times over the past 12 months.
