Executive Summary

Nisos researchers, in conjunction with Chainalysis, investigated a network of Twitter accounts associated with a non-fungible token (NFT) scam that attempted to pose as legitimate and sometimes popular NFT stores. Tweets from these Twitter accounts link to fraudulent NFT stores that attempt to access a potential victim's wallet in order to steal and likely resell NFTs.

This scam targets individuals interested in minting NFTs that they believe are associated with legitimate NFT stores. Through these fraudulent sites, the scammers gain access to the victim's NFT wallet after being tricked into granting an NFT transfer to the scammer when the victim believes they are accepting the minting of a new NFT. This then allows the scammer to remove an NFT and possibly Ethereum funds from wallet services.

Nisos identified a network of thousands of Twitter accounts involved in producing tweets to advertise these fraudulent NFT stores, with thousands of additional accounts disseminating these tweets through quote tweeting.

Twitter accounts that propagate links to the scam sites generally follow three Twitter accounts, many of which are associated with Indonesian persons and services, suggesting that the fraudulent actors running this scam are located there; however, the actors could be conducting the scam from one or more locations with the use of VPNs and other security measures.

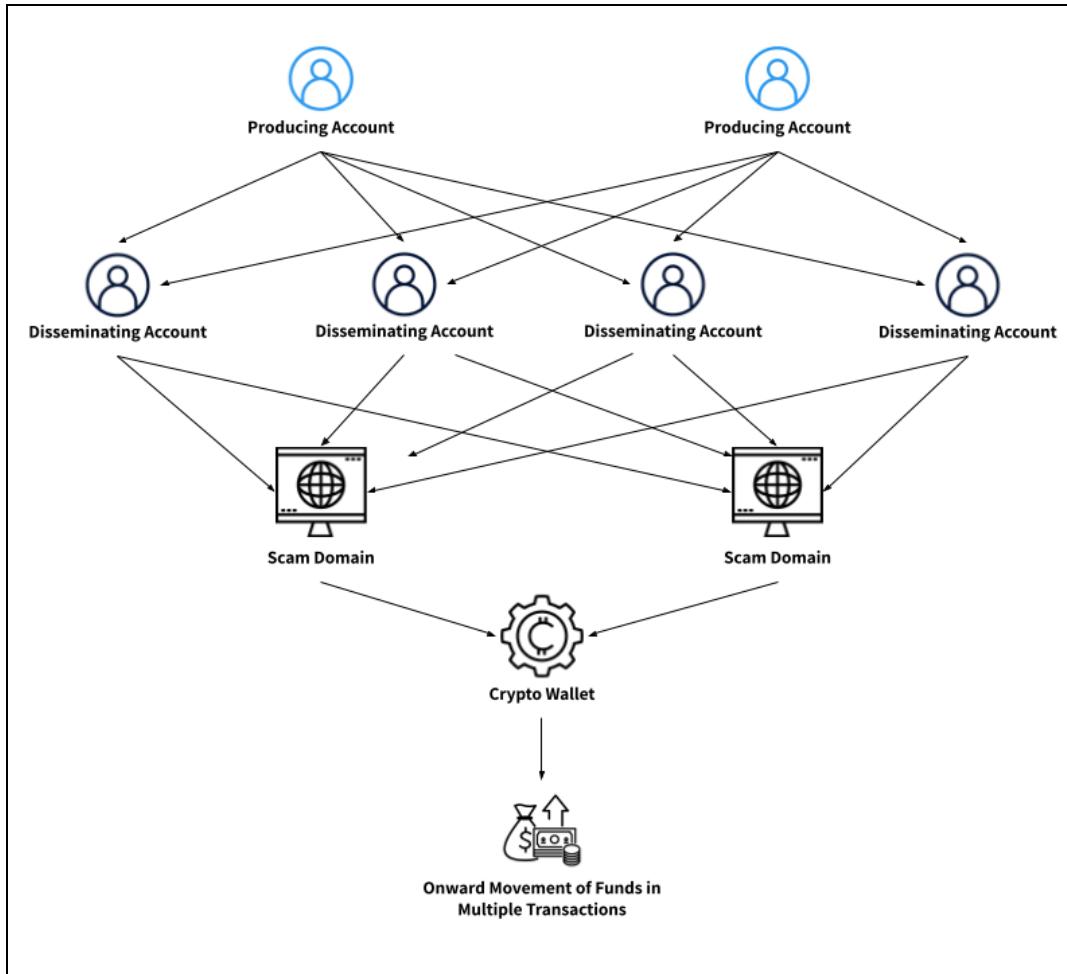

While it is difficult to determine the total dollar loss, wallets associated with the scam websites have received hundreds of transactions ranging from tens to hundreds of dollars since the scam began in late July 2022. While some wallets were used across hundreds of scam-associated domains, some wallets were possibly only associated with a handful.

Nisos conducted its research and analysis on these tweets with a cut off of 11:59 pm on 11 October, as new Twitter accounts and fraudulent NFT stores continue to appear each day. However, some analysis and examples on crypto wallets or processes used by the scammers have been pulled from subsequent dates to capture transactions and formats of interest.

Findings

Nisos identified the following characteristics of the operation between 26 July and 11 October 2022; however, we note that these patterns and processes persisted following our analytical cutoff date:

1. Thousands of Twitter accounts are responsible for producing tweets that are linked to nearly 1,000 fraudulent NFT store sites.
2. The producing tweets have followed roughly two main formats, with the first version of the tweets prevalent between 26 July and early October and the second format prevalent through 11 October. Other variations of the tweets also were shared.
3. Thousands of additional Twitter accounts form multiple networks and are responsible for disseminating the original tweets through quote tweeting. These disseminating accounts generally all follow three Twitter accounts and have zero followers.
4. The disseminating Twitter accounts each tagged roughly a dozen random accounts in each of their quote tweets, including both accounts for individuals with small numbers of followers who did not appear connected to NFTs, as well as major NFT-related accounts with thousands of followers.
5. Of the three accounts followed by the disseminating Twitter account networks, most were located in or associated with Indonesia, suggesting that is where the scammers are located.
6. The scam websites trick victims into granting access and approving transfers to the scammers through fraudulent prompts on the site. The victims believe they are granting permission to mint a new NFT when they are actually approving the transfer of an NFT.
7. Multiple wallets are used to receive funds and NFTs through the scam sites, although the operation probably relies on a handful to act as the first layer in receiving funds from victims across the majority of its scam sites.
8. Some of the most commonly used wallets possibly attempt to mask the movement of currency by first transferring funds outside those wallets - where funds are first received by victims probably in Ethereum - in currencies other than Ethereum.
9. Over 500 domains associated with the NFT scam were registered to a single IP address, while the scam also implemented additional IP addresses to which roughly a dozen scam-related domains each were registered. The total number of IP addresses used in the scam is unknown.

Graphic 1: Flow of Producing Twitter accounts containing links to scam website domains being propagated by Disseminating Twitter accounts. Victims of the scam domains then lose their NFTs to the fraudsters, which are likely resold. This type of network is repeated numerous times across the scam.

Background

In late September, Nisos researchers identified multiple Twitter accounts sharing NFT-related posts in a nearly identical format that linked to an alleged NFT store. The accounts that were quote tweeting these NFT-related posts were each following three other Twitter accounts and had zero Twitter followers. Each of the posts shared by the NFT-related accounts used language and emojis in an identical fashion.

Twitter accounts @_Imaginry_Ones and @Imaginry_Ones_ were attempting to impersonate Twitter account @Imaginary_Ones. Both of the imposter accounts regularly retweeted posts from the legitimate accounts. We note that the larger network of accounts involved in this scam followed the same impersonation pattern with additional NFT sellers.

Format of Scam Tweets

Nisos identified at least two main formats for the tweets produced by these accounts, one of which contains a grammatical error. The first format - using the phrase “because of the bear market of the market” was the main pattern through roughly 2 October, when tweets of the second format - using “because of the bear market” - became more common.

We note that additional tweets have created variations on this format. For example, starting roughly 6 October, versions of the tweets replaced “Because of the bear market of the market” and “Because of the bear market” with “We’re working with our partners on the best timing to announce”.

First Scam Tweet

On 26 July, what is probably the first tweet attributed to this network was posted by Twitter account @MutAnt_MusksNFT. We note that similar tweets by this or other accounts were not produced until 26 August.

Following a month gap, Twitter account @CryptoNinja_NFT produced the first tweets that followed the same format: mentioning “the bear market of the market” and the minting of 300 NFTs. This account had more tweets and followers previous to these postings than the other accounts that produced and disseminated these tweets later in the operation. As of 13 October, the account had not posted since 26 August.

Wide Network of Tweet Sources

As of early October, the three accounts that retweeted the posts created by the @WhlsBe_c, @_Imaginry_Ones, and @_Imaginry_Ones_ accounts had previously also retweeted posts from additional accounts that created identical posts and almost certainly belonged to the same user or users, including (but not limited to):

- @WhlsBe_c
- @_Imaginry_Ones
- @_Imaginry_Ones_
- @_Krapopolis
- @quirkiesnft_c
- @quirkiesnft_d
- @SanSound3_
- @Pixelmon_s

The above accounts were all created in 2020. Based on the use of an underscore and a letter in accounts like @quirkiesnft_c and @quirkiesnft_d, as well as the use of an underscore and the letter c in @WhlsBe_c, it is likely that these accounts have already created or are prepared to create numerous identical versions as each account gets shut down, possibly rotating through each letter of the alphabet in the different versions. A sampling of usernames utilized by accounts that produce these tweets in Appendix A demonstrates this pattern of slight variations.

Graphic 17: Small sampling of Quirkies-related real (top) and fake accounts.<sup>15</sup>

We also note that the accounts that share these tweets likely make up multiple networks, based on similar tweets from other accounts being propagated by a large number of accounts unassociated with the ones that had shared the previously identified posts. This suggests a delegation of responsibilities between these numerous accounts that produce and disseminate the tweets being organized in a manner for certain accounts to propagate the posts by specific producers.

Between 26 July and 11 October 2022, roughly 5,850 original tweets by over 3,000 Twitter accounts produced these tweets in the nearly identical pattern, with the only significant variations relating to the specific fake NFT store it was advertising. Thousands of other accounts then took those tweets and disseminated them through massive quote tweeting.

Scam Operation and Processes

Propagation Through Twitter Networks

Using this context, Nisos researchers identified a vast network of Twitter accounts involved in propagating the scam whose intent is to steal NFTs or funds from wallets by leading potential victims to its websites. The scammers appeared to advertise solely on Twitter, using what Nisos will furthermore refer to as Producing and Disseminating Twitter accounts. See [Appendix B for a list of websites advertised by the Producing tweets.]

On 7 October, Nisos identified that a tweet by imposter account @WhlsBe_c - which had zero followers and was following zero accounts - was quote tweeted 125 times in less than 12 hours. Our analysis identified that the accounts that quote tweeted this post - and were therefore Disseminating Twitter accounts - matched the profile of having zero followers and were following roughly three Indonesia-associated or major accounts. We note that all 125 accounts quote tweeted the post twice, except for one, @JoshOddOneOut23. This difference in the number of quote tweets almost certainly holds no significance regarding the account's potential role and influence, and we assess this account to be part of the network, based on it being followed by zero accounts and its following of three accounts, including Netflix Indonesia.<sup>16</sup>

Out of the three accounts followed by most of the 125 Disseminating Twitter accounts, the most common accounts were generally Indonesian services and artists with millions of followers including music artist Fiersa Besari<sup>17</sup> and Indonesia news stations Compass TV,<sup>18</sup> Metro TV,<sup>19</sup> and Detikcom.<sup>20</sup> We also note that many of these Disseminating accounts that quote tweeted the posts by the Producing accounts were created in September 2022, soon before they participated in disseminating the tweets by the Producing Twitter accounts.

Disseminating accounts also attempt to increase their audience by each tagging roughly a dozen additional Twitter accounts in their quote tweets. These tagged accounts include both smaller, seemingly random accounts with small numbers of followers that appear to have no public interest in NFTs or cryptocurrencies, as well as tagging NFT and crypto-associated accounts with thousands of followers. No pattern was identified for the accounts tagged, as the process and distribution appeared to be random.

Graphics 19 - 22: Sampling of Disseminating accounts that retweet posts by Producing accounts; each has 0 followers, is following 3 accounts, and has a creation date of September 2022.<sup>21 22 23 24</sup>

Evidence of Extensive Twitter Networks

Nisos researchers assess that the network responsible for the NFT scam implements bots and other automated tools in an attempt to disseminate its posts from its minimally-followed accounts. For example, as of 10 October, a post by Producing account @_Imaginry_Ones from 4 October had almost 4,000 quote tweets by Disseminating accounts similar to those previously identified with zero followers and who followed roughly three accounts of generally Indonesia-based entities.

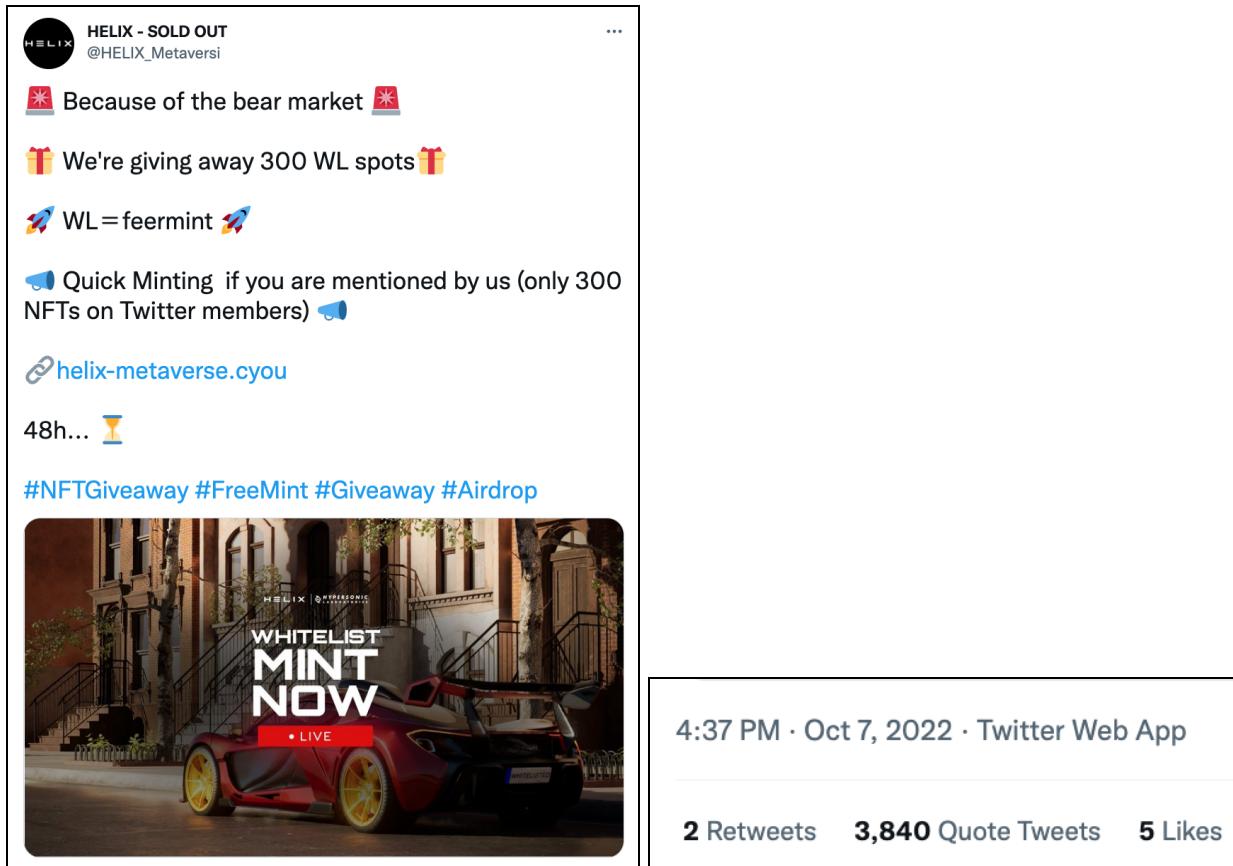

1:29 AM · Oct 4, 2022 · Twitter Web App

8 Retweets 3,908 Quote Tweets 10 Likes

Graphics 24 and 25: Quote tweets on a 4 October post by @_Imaginry_Ones as of 10 October.<sup>26</sup>

As well, a similar tweet by Producing account @HELIX_Metaversi was posted on 7 October, and as of 10 October, it had over 3,840 quote tweets.

Graphic 26 and 27: Post by @HELIX_Metaversi on 7 October, with over 3,840 Quote Tweets by 10 October.<sup>27</sup>

Nisos researchers identified a sampling of the account networks responsible for the roughly 4,000 quote tweets of both the @_Imaginry_Ones and @HELIX_Metaversi posts by identifying roughly 430 of the Disseminating accounts that quote tweeted each post. In this roughly 11% representation of the quote tweets for each post, we note that there was not a single Disseminating account that had shared both posts. While the sampling size is small and does not eliminate the chance that there are accounts involved in disseminating both tweets, this demonstrates the magnitude of Disseminating accounts created to share posts by the Producing accounts and suggests that each Producing account or a small number of them together may each have their own designated network of Disseminating accounts. See [Appendix C for Disseminating account samples.]

Victims

The websites linked to these Twitter posts use a technique commonly used in these types of scams, whose coding kits to support draining NFT wallets can be purchased by potential threat actors often for less than $150. This scam attempts to target individuals interested in buying or claiming NFTs by convincing them to connect their wallets to the scam website. When a victim connects their wallet and attempts to sign the message as a means to “prove” to the website that the user has the correct associated ownership keys for that wallet - a common practice on legitimate sites - the scammer is then given access to the wallet. The victim is then further convinced to click on prompts from the scam site,

allegedly agreeing to mint a new NFT when in reality the scam site is getting contractual approval from the victim to transfer NFTs from the victim's wallet to the scammer's wallet.<sup>28</sup>

As an early example of these actions, the fraudulent NFT store advertised by the first tweet in this scam, produced on 26 July [see previous First Scam Tweet section] - [https://mutant-musks.wl-pre\[.\]com](https://mutant-musks.wl-pre[.]com) - was associated with wallet 0x575C82Bb91196C35Ef3De283F34c81c5A56805CD. This address was identified as having partaken in an NFT theft on 10 July - roughly two weeks before the first tweet in the scam's perpetuated format was produced. As shown in this example, the scammers profited off of the theft by then selling the stolen NFTs.

These are some of a big campaign of sc4m they keep create new sites each other day and im getting tired of posting. when you hit " Mint " then it will trigger this signature which then will drain tokens / nfts.

When you hit SIGN then u are done. So dont do that.

Possible Acquisition and Creation of Twitter Accounts

Producing Twitter accounts @WhlsBe_c, @_Imaginry_Ones, and @Imaginry_Ones_ were created in March and April 2020, but have had limited original posts before their early October 2022 creations of NFT scam tweets. This suggests that the accounts were created years ago with this eventual purpose in mind or that the accounts had been previously used and repurposed - by the original account creators themselves or through account theft - for this scam.

On 1 and 5 April 2020, the possible creator of @_Imaginry_Ones posted photos that are potentially attributed to the user of the account, based on the text associated with the tweets. We were unable to confirm if the account still belonged to the same individual or if this account was stolen to participate in the scam against the original creator's will or knowledge.

The posts had likes from two accounts, both who claimed their location as Nigeria, which matched the location of most of the account's early followers. Other Producing accounts attempted to increase their legitimacy by first having other types of posts, particularly by retweeting posts by the legitimate NFT stores they were attempting to impersonate or, possibly in this case, by leaving tweets produced by the original account creator.

Graphics 32 - 34: Photos of the possible creator and/or user of @_Imaginry_Ones, posted in April 2020.<sup>32 33 34</sup>

We also identified that Disseminating Twitter accounts likely stole information from other legitimate accounts in order to quickly create fake profiles. For example, Disseminating account @vor0nov96 - created in September 2022 - included profile information in its description, including a Twitter handle and email address - that is actually attributed to Twitter account @1Drizz, which was created in January 2012. Similarly, images from Twitter and other social media sites were stolen and repurposed on Disseminating and Producing accounts, probably as a means to boost their legitimacy.

Crypto Wallets

Wallet 0x082666F545eC0c9Aa60f2F02D175DA4955b954Ae

Nisos researchers identified that, for domains associated with scam websites identified in [Appendices B and D], at least 230 were associated with wallet 0x082666F545eC0c9Aa60f2F02D175DA4955b954Ae [W1]. According to posts by multiple Twitter users between 30 September and 5 October, the wallet was identified as involved in stealing multiple NFTs.

Nisos analysis identified that between 30 September - when W1 first began transactions - and 11 October, it sent funds exclusively to wallet 0xb6bd9f4c672c95c2ffaafa994a239eaa52f3299f [W2]; all of these transfers from W1 to W2 were in currencies other than Ethereum.

W2 then outflowed money to numerous other accounts, although its largest recipients were 0x7e1fedd654e8347354e03650514a3122b41025da [W3] - 34.54 ETH equaling $45,745.08 - and 0x1cf136238aa20db58d828a099a4bbe5b8dca7e7 [W4] - 6.80 ETH equaling $8,716.59.

W4 has sent the vast majority of its funds to W3 - 48.50 ETH equaling $63,956.43 - providing this whole sum between 19 and 25 September in eight transactions. We note that W3 has sent out less than $1,000 since 18 September, suggesting that it may hold a significant amount of the scam's income.

We provide the below simplified depiction of these money transactions, noting that, unless stated otherwise, these accounts received and sent money to additional accounts.

Graphic 45: Simplified flow of funds from W1 - the wallet associated with over 115 scam sites - to W3.

Wallet 0x9afDbc669f83f2Eb81f5cB3c12d26454cB9c0e27

Nisos researchers identified that, for the sites identified in Appendices B and D, at least 230 were associated with wallet 0x9afDbc669f83f2Eb81f5cB3c12d26454cB9c0e27 [W5].

We note that, as of 19 October, all financial transactions for W5 - both inflow and outflow - occurred between 12 and 14 October, with all outflow limited to currencies that did not include Ethereum.

Wallet 0x85B9EC2787d47B2cFC21445d19aBa062CC3CE923

Nisos researchers identified that, for the sites identified in Appendices B and D, at least 100 were associated with wallet 0x85B9EC2787d47B2cFC21445d19aBa062CC3CE923 [W6], including those identified in the Wide Network of Tweet Sources section. On 7, 8, and 9 October, the wallet was identified as involved in stealing multiple NFTs.

Nisos analysis identified that between 4 and 11 October, all of W6's transfers in currency that was not Ethereum were sent to wallet 0x39c09b00382c9d310f7be4d90d10980a9ea05dc7 [W7]. Any Ethereum transfers from W6 to other wallets between 30 September - when the wallet appears to have been created - and 11 October were in amounts less than $1,000.

W7 transferred Ethereum exclusively to wallet 0x6a3c380adaf667f580b115d056f6aff55e5193a5 [W8] in eight transfers between 7 and 11 October - 40.90 ETH equaling $54,571.00.

As of 11 October, W8 had no outflow of funds, suggesting that it is used as an endpoint for at least some of the funds acquired through the scam. We note that W8 had received significant Ethereum transfers including:

- 78.10 ETH equaling $106,790.52 from 0xdddd6578aaa0010808bb13b95c9838c440f8b682e
- 64.44 ETH equaling $102,507.91 from 0xfc99fe4c5beb2cd5dd648510f909a5dc0ef22daa
- 27.10 ETH equaling $35,092.06 from 0x34f3f4ba979e177a517970e014250cab61a80529

We provide the below simplified depiction of these money transactions, noting that, unless stated otherwise, these accounts received and sent money to additional accounts.

Graphic 49: Simplified flow of funds from W6 - the wallet associated with over 100 scam sites - to W8.

Additional Wallets

Nisos researchers also identified that multiple scam NFT websites were associated with additional wallets, suggesting that - in addition to the previously identified wallets associated with a large number of sites - the network utilizes a wide range of wallets to receive and disperse its money. For example:

- Wallet 0x8D30Ae75BAA378e1194d4F95146b712e794a0c42 was associated with xcopy.mintf.co and renga.mintf.co.
- Wallet 0x685E7dB34eAe3320Fe1673b1507c12b6a6a19324 was associated with xqui.com and deadfelaz.xyz.
- Wallet 0x2931BA7494123213A1Eab3BC9298EA07730Ab41b was associated with krapopolisnft.mints-now.com.
- Wallet 0x41126e19981eB1bBFe92b1d1cc4Fe7104b044ab2 was associated with exosama.bond, gangsterallstar.bond, helix-metaverse.cyou, kitaro.bond, and overlord.bond.
- Wallet 0x08bC4C07a72FD3bF26565516b5d6dE1FeE715885 was associated with invisiblefriends.cyou and veefriends.bond.

Domain Registration

Nisos researchers identified almost 900 domains that were promoted by and linked to the Twitter network in tweets between 26 July and 11 October in an attempt to sell scam NFTs or steal NFTs from potential victims. The majority of these websites were registered to PrivacyGuardian[.]org, associated with E. Highland Ave, Ste F104 in Phoenix, Arizona. We note that other IP addresses than those outlined below were also associated with multiple scam sites, and provide the following only as examples.

IP Address 45.66.159.12

Many of the domains associated with the NFT scam were registered with IP address 45.66.159.12. Additional research into this IP revealed over 500 sites associated with selling fake NFTs, some of which had not been identified previously through the Producing Twitter accounts. [see Appendix D for list of sites]

IP Address 138.197.184.124

Multiple scam-associated domains were attributed to IP address 138.197.184.124. For example, helix-metaverse[.]cyou was associated with the IP address between 6 and 9 October, during which time Producing account @HELIX-Metaversi shared its post advertising the domain, which received over 4,000 retweets by Disseminating accounts [see Wider Twitter Network section].

Nisos identified that - in order to reach this IP address and the associated domains below - the scammers accessed the IP through Secure Shell (SSH) from IP address 47.57.241.129, associated with Hong Kong.<sup>48</sup> IP address 47.57.241.129 hosts glzy8[.]com, a Chinese-language site that describes itself as a free non-profit learning and exchange platform<sup>49</sup> whose front page displays multiple apps and software for download.<sup>50</sup>

It was unclear if there was any direct association between the scammers and this site.

Graphic 50: Front page of glzy8[.]com, as of 14 October 2022.<sup>51</sup>

Research into IP 138.197.184.124 revealed additional NFT scam-associated sites connected to the IP:

helix-metaverse.cyou
invisiblefriends.cyou
kitaro.bond

veefriends.bond

Of the 11 domains identified as associated with IP address 138.197.184.124, seven were still active as of 14 October. Five of the domains were associated with wallet 0x41126e19981eB1bBFe92b1d1cc4Fe7104b044ab2, while two were associated with 0x08bC4C07a72FD3bF26565516b5d6dE1FeE715885, neither of which had significant transactions to indicate wide success in gaining victims.

IP Address 159.89.95.203

IP address 159.89.95.203 was associated with scam-connected domains. For example, apehatersclub.bond was associated with the IP address from 28 September to 11 October 2022, during which time Producing account @hyunjinn1m tweeted a link to the site.

IP Address 157.230.10.75

IP address 157.230.10.75 was associated with scam-connected domains. For example, genuineundead.bond was associated with the IP from 26 September to 12 October, during which time a tweet linking to the domain was posted.

IP Address 142.93.13.149

IP address 142.93.13.149 was associated with scam-connected domains. For example, undeadblocks.cyou was associated with the IP from 24 September to 9 October 2022, during which time Producing account @Na07111959 tweeted a link to the site on 26 September.

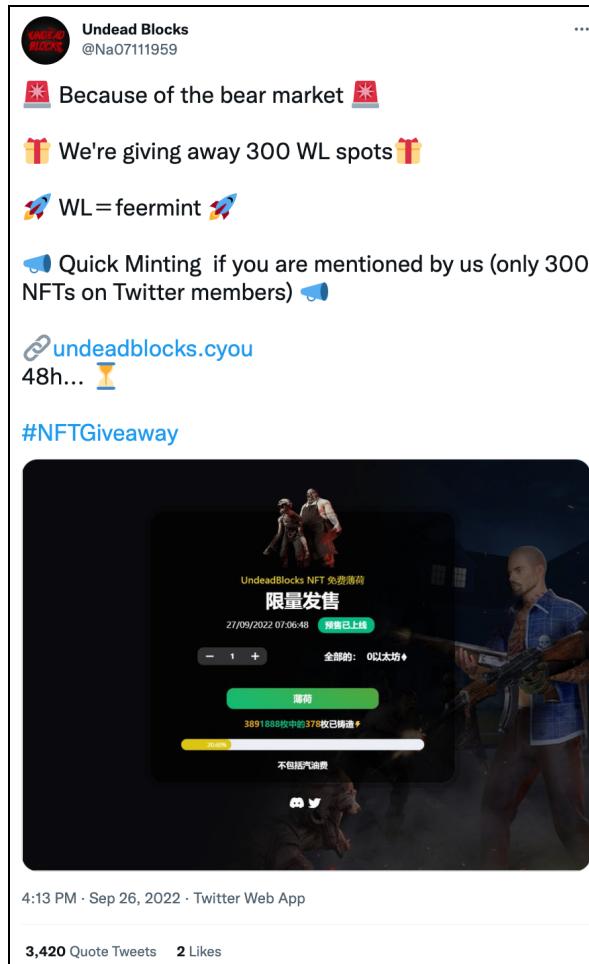

<sup>54</sup> <https://twitter.com/milannshrestga/status/1576077133520441344>

IP Address 161.35.112.163

IP address 161.35.112.163 has likely also been used in the NFT scam. As of 13 October, no tweets from Producing accounts advertising these domains remained viewable; however, multiple Producing accounts shared name similarities with these domains and match the patterns identified for the previous IP address. For example, multiple Producing accounts containing degentoonz (@_degentoonz and @_degentoonz_1) have advertised domain degentoonznfts.xyz, suggesting that the Degentoonz.cyou domain associated with this IP was potentially shut down or abandoned with the alternate advertised version favored by the scammers.

Appendix A: Original Producing Tweets

The following list of over 3,000 Twitter accounts are those that originally produced scam NFT tweets in the identical format between 26 July - when the first related scam tweet was produced - and 11 October 2022. In that time period, these accounts produced over 5,850 original tweets related to the scam, which were then disseminated by many other Twitter accounts.
