Intelligence is Not a Product; it's a Process

"Intelligence" products, like the feeds and platforms that dominate the Cyber Threat Intelligence (CTI) market, may contain meaningful and relevant information but only provide a raw collection of facts. As such, they are not, by themselves, actionable and are not intelligence.

True intelligence is the intersection of critical data, technology processes, and human analysis that delivers insight that is timely, relevant, and actionable.

"Nisos has been a game-changer for us. Their 'outside the firewall intelligence' enables us to do in-depth analysis of both cyber and non-traditional risk and accelerate our speed of acquisition. Beyond speed, they provide a deep understanding of potential risks and allows us to address them in a timely manner."

TEAM

Nisos' team is comprised of cross-functional experts who disrupt adversarial operations. They possess field experience, many come from 3-letter U.S. Government agencies, and speak multiple languages. The Intelligence Analyst Team engaged in all client work includes a Client Success Director, Lead Analyst, Intelligence Advisor, and a Managing Principal. When deep investigations or rapid responses are needed, Nisos assembles a team of analyst able to dig in right away. We call this The Nisos Dogpile.

"We trust and look to Nisos when support is needed to address complex security challenges. Throughout the course of our relationship, their ability to conduct tailored evidence collection and analysis to aid in our security investigations has enabled us to mitigate significant risks across cybersecurity, disinformation, fraud, and physical security."
